CLAN CARMICHAEL

The first survey of Christian churches in Scotland in 1116 refers to the church founded by Queen Margaret in 1068 as "Llan" (church, later called kirk) Mychel (of St. Michael). Thus, "Caer Mychel" became the name of the place, and the name was adopted by the residents for their surname.

The first Carmichael name of record is Robert de Carmitely, a scribes' attempt to spell the name— who resigned claims to the patronage of the church of Cleghorn around 1220, and who is again mentioned in the Charter of Dryburgh Abbey in 1226 as Robert de Carmichael. The name evolved through a series of spellings to Carmichael as it is generally spelled today.
